

Le trampoline détruit le quai, du à l'orage sévère

Par Emilie et Aurélie

Pendant la soirée du talent, il y a eu un orage miniature qui a duré 5 minutes. L'orage a apporté avec lui de grands coups de vent qui ont soulevé le trampoline. Ce dernier a passé par dessus le quai en emportant son ancre avec lui. Le tout brisa une partie du quai, lorsque le trampoline passa par dessus le quai 22.

Dave, Cody et Johnny se sont mis au travail dès le lendemain pour réparer les dégâts de la veille. Ils ont tassé le trampoline sur le côté et se sont mis à refaire le quai pour que la nage libre puisse être accessible aux baigneurs. Nous souhaitons dire merci à Dave, Cody et Johnny pour tous leurs efforts.

Horse Show Huge Success

By Joshua Cohen

Today at the horse show, the riders (of all levels) did flats. Flats consist of a walk, a trot and a canter! After lots of fun, some riders (intermediate and advanced) did jumps. I won third place for flats.

After the horses were brought in, we humans did hunter jumps. Ben (in India) even jumped the last and highest jump. Ben is the champ on foot, and Kyle on horseback.

The Story of Stu the Bean

By Maya Hillcoat

This is Stu the Bean. I made Stu the Bean on Monday, the first week of the second session. There was an activity at 11:00 a.m. where we had to draw Stu or Nadia, and I chose to draw Stu. However, I didn't feel like drawing him as a person, so I drew him as a pig. It was a funny drawing! Then I had a brilliant idea: I should draw him as a bean! So that's how Stu the Bean came to be.

Jamaica Recounts Their Search for Olympus During Outing at the Island

By Margo Baltzan and Amélie Barsoum

It all started when three Jamaica girls, known as Amélie, Margo and Emily were looking for firewood to build a campfire on the island. After a little while, Emily said, “We have to find the perfect stick.”

Suddenly, we turned around and a ray of sunlight shone on a perfect stick, which made it sparkle. It was a tall and skinny log standing in the middle of the dark forest.

Emily and Amélie both exclaimed, “Wow!” Margo declared, “It was sent by Jesus!” So we took the stick to our campfire.

Later on, we were scouting around the island looking for treasures, such as cool rocks and sticks. Suddenly, we fell upon a pond with goldish rocks. The explanation for their colour was that the sun was shining on them.

“It must be the gold pond!” Margo declared once again. Emily and Amélie smiled.

All of a sudden, Margo froze in her tracks. “Look!” She finally exclaimed, “The path to Olympus!” Lying in front of us was an eight-foot-long rock leading slowly into the water. We all stared in astonishment.

Margo decided to organize a search party that included Jamie, Meira, Nava, Ava, Maya, Amélie and I.

Sadly, we never found Olympus, but you might...

Should I Keep My Frog or Not?

Catching animals can be fun, but it can be bad for them. For example, frogs, toads and snakes are animals that campers catch.

The oil on our hands is bad for frogs. Snakes need to move – they can’t slither in a tiny aquarium!

People never put toads and other animals back where they found them. Catch them, but don’t keep them!

PS: When you catch frogs with your hands, the mother eats them cause she won’t recognize the smell.

Left: After spending three out of her four weeks at camp with a cast on her wrist, Ava has come to a profound conclusion. She believes that it’s better to focus on what people have in common, rather than what makes them different. Drawing by Ava-Monet Jast

France Spends a Lovely Afternoon Across the Lake

Today (Friday) we went to the Island. We swam all day.

We also tried looking for Olympus, and with Jamaica’s help, we found lots of clues. Sadly, we missed Backwards Day. We had lots of fun on the island.
